

Senior Program Director
The American Lung Association of the Central States
St. Louis, MO

The American Lung Association of the Central States seeks a Sr. Program Director its St. Louis office. The Senior Program director is responsible for the regional management and measurement of our program delivery. The Senior Program director will lead staff through the organizations performance based management system. This position will continue to develop and implement of all community programs in key areas of asthma, tobacco, clean air, research and education within their market area and works closely with the Senior Vice President of Community Initiatives, and program volunteer committees and task groups.

- Maintains effective relationships with donors, government and community agencies, as well as public and private organizations.
- Ensures that all regional programs are delivered efficiently and effectively with measurable outcomes.
- Assists Senior Vice President of Community Initiatives in identifying grant funding opportunities.

Salary: $40,000 - $45,000

Qualifications:

A baccalaureate degree from an accredited college or university, or equivalent experience is desirable. Marketing and communication skills are basic to this position.

Knowledge and understanding of the basic principles of community and school health education; fundraising; volunteer recruitment; training and coordination; and principles of promotion and marketing in a not-for-profit voluntary health agency.

All qualified applicants please submit resume with cover letter to Rjones@alacentral.org or fax to Attn: Robin Jones (214) 630-8092.